Aloha my name is Kelsey-Lee Bicoy-Juario. I am in the sixth grade and I am 11 years old. I go to Maunaloa elementary school on Molokai. The way me and my Ukulele would change the world is to write a song. This song would be about peace and harmony. This song is for people who are suffering, ill, sad, lost their love ones, are away from home and at war. As I play my sweet melody the wind will carry my chords and lyrics across the ocean to every one in need of a hug. With every strum my ukulele would have the encouraging sounds and heal those in need and lift up smiles bigger then the world. As my song travels, it would bring peace love and harmony around the world. If every one had a ukulele in this world and the love that Hawaii brings, there would be no worries in this world, because with our tropical island and my ukulele mixed with words from the ocean we could change the world one song at a time and could help millions. That's how me and my ukulele would change the world.
