

Waikaloa – 9/16/13

By: Jarret Kealoha Delos Santos & Eric Smith

A visit with my cousins Kenneth & Dennette at Waikaloa. They invite the ohana to come visit and camp.

Cooking area

Flat Screen TV & DVD collection

Fish for dinner

Kauleilepo Heiau - The pop-up tent, table, and chairs are on the platform where the old cook house was located. Legend says a stone idol representing a fish god is buried under the platform.

Springs pop up everywhere. Kenneth tells of a large pond nearby, believed to be the home of a mo'ō.

Kainalimu Beach fronts the property. Kenneth tells of the giant 30 foot waves that frequent in bad weather. A very scary experience when it occurs and definitely something you need to get use to.

Kainalimu Beach

View from Nanu'alele Point, which looks back towards Hana Bay.

Wailoa Bay

Wailoa bay is just a 5 minute walk along the coast towards Hana. The bay is beautiful and calm. Rocky bottom, so wear your slippers when you swim there. Lots of fresh water springs in the bay.
